Mr. Allen W. Dulles
Central Intelligence Bureau
Washington, D. C.

Dear Allen:

You will recall that a few weeks ago I had a conference with you in regard to our work [redacted] explained at that time that we were in the process of preparing a short report to state precisely what we thought the problem was.

Attached hereto you will find six copies of the report which I discussed with you. I am not sending copies directly to your brother, Mr. John Foster Dulles, in view of the fact that I understood that when you received copies of the report you would see that he received several of them.

After you have had time to read this report and discuss it with your brother I should like to have a conference and probably bring one or two of our directors along, in order that we may get your suggestions and comments, which will be most helpful to us in our future planning.

[redacted]

If you can let me know when it would be convenient for me to have another conference with you, I should greatly appreciate it.

With kindest regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

[redacted]
